THE new hot spot for recovering anorexics isn't even in a fashion capital. Berlin, the kooky-cool center of curiously themed eateries - blind waiters serve you in the darkened dining room at Nocti Vagus, insects are on the menu at Restaurant Soda - is now home to the world's first restaurant for food phobes. Opened in December, Sehnsucht - which means longing (auf Deutsch) - is a big hit with the waifish set, serving fairly ordinary fare such as venison sauerbraten, duck breast in jus d'orange, chocolate mousse, etc. Its menu, however, offers no descriptions of the dishes, which psychologists say can turn anorexics off. Owner and chef Katja Eichbaum got the idea while in eating rehab. "I wanted to pass on some of the help and understanding that I received during that time," she says. Eichbaum believes this can help recovering anorexics feel comfortable, which will help them to eat normally. We totally can't identify, always feeling overly comfortable in restaurants(unlike French women, we do get fat).

REMEMBER Fashion Week? We talked to everyone, from Jessica Capshaw - "My honeymoon was in the Seychelles!" - to Anna Wintour, who, at the Vera Wang show, told contributor Laurie Heifetz that she absolutely loved "going to stay with Annette and Oscar de la Renta in the Dominican Republic." Cynthia Nixon says that Nantucket has a special place in her heart - "I used to go as a kid" - while Lizzie Grubman was all about Los Cabos, in Mexico: "I go every year with my family for Christmas, it's my favorite place in the entire world. I love Las Ventanas."

BE FRIENDLY

THE Caribbean's couples-only, all-inclusive resorts have never been very gay friendly - until last October, that is, when Sandals resorts announced that that it was. Corres Hobicca went plus-one two weeks ago. Here's his report:

"My boyfriend Jason and I were pretty sure we'd be the only same-sex couple on property, ; could tell, we were. When we made our reservation, the resort did make a point of asking if bed would be acceptable. But that was about it as far as anyone went in making us feel as i typical Sandals clientele. Our personal butler, Moria, warm and smiling, was typical of the si insisted that he got some curious looks from other guests as we walked around the property that no one bothered to speak to him. (One guest did say hello to me at the lunch buffet, bu busy loading up his plate with jerk chicken to notice.)"
